Plaintiff Crowley Maritime Corporation ("Crowley") submits the following response to the "Brief Re New Authority" filed by defendant RLI Insurance Company ("RLI") on March 26, 2008.

RLI relies upon Qualcomm, Inc. v. Certain Underwriters at Lloyd's, 2008 Cal.App. LEXIS 394 (March 25, 2008) ("Qualcomm"), a new decision by the California Court of Appeal that resolves an issue not presented in this action -- whether an insured's settlement with its primary insurer for an amount substantially below the primary limits, which creates a "gap" that conclusively establishes that the primary limits will never be fully exhausted by payment of the subject loss, relieves an excess insurer of liability for the unreimbursed portion of the loss which exceeds the primary limits.[1] Here there has been no settlement between the insured (Crowley) and any of the insurers involved.

The present case is also distinguishable from Qualcomm in that there was no allegation in the latter case -- as there is here -- that the excess insurer breached the implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing (1) by failing to investigate the merits of a proposed settlement which exceeded the excess policy's threshold of coverage, (2) by failing to give good faith consideration to the proposed settlement, and (3) by failing to consent to the settlement even though it was a reasonable good faith settlement. See Complaint ¶¶ 9, 11, 28-35. As demonstrated in Crowley's opposition brief (at pp. 4-9), Crowley has fully matured claims based on the foregoing failures that breached the implied covenant. Qualcomm involved no such failures, nor any alleged breach of the implied covenant.

[1] The Qualcomm decision was one of two cases cited by Defendant Twin City Fire Insurance Company ("Twin City") in the "Statements of Recent Decisions" it filed on March 26, 2008. The other new decision cited by Twin City, Manzarek v. St. Paul Fire Ins. Co., No. 06-55936, 2008 WL 763385 (9th Cir. March 25, 2008), is also inapposite. Manzarek relied on Waller v. Truck Ins. Exch., Inc., 11 Cal.4th 1 (1995), for the proposition that there can be no breach of the implied covenant where there is no right to coverage. However, as explained at pp. 5-6 of Crowley's opposition brief, that principle only applies where there is no potential coverage under the policy, not where -- as here -- it is claimed that a condition precedent to the obligation to pay benefits has not yet occurred, but where there is no contention that the condition precedent will not be satisfied later.

In Qualcomm, the insured suffered a $29 million loss. The insured settled with its primary insurer (National Union) for only $16 million, even though the primary limits were $20 million. The settlement for less than the amount of the primary limits created a gap which ensured that the full $20 million primary limits would never be paid in connection with the subject loss. The insured nevertheless sued its excess carrier (Lloyd's) seeking reimbursement for $9 million -- the portion of the unreimbursed loss that exceeded the primary limits. The insured argued that the primary limits were effectively exhausted by the combination of the $16 million paid in settlement by National Union and the $4 million which it was prepared to absorb as an uninsured loss. (Qualcomm sought to recover from Lloyd's only the $9 million by which the subject loss exceeded its $20 million primary limits, rather than the full $13 million by which the loss exceeded the $16 million settlement paid by National Union.)

The present case is distinguishable because Crowley has reached no settlement with any of its insurers, and no insurer has been given any release. As a result, there is no certainty here, as there was in Qualcomm, that the primary limits will never be fully exhausted by the payment of the subject loss. The Franklin Fund Loss exceeds $22 million (Complaint ¶16), which is sufficient to fully exhaust all the insurance underlying RLI's second level excess policy (both defendant Federal Insurance Company's $10 million primary limits and the $10 million limits of the first level excess policy issued by defendant Twin City Fire Insurance Company). Nor is there any reason why Crowley should be required -- as implied by Twin City and RLI -- to prosecute three successive actions, involving the same coverage issues under excess policies which "follow form" with the primary policy, in order to obtain complete relief. That argument (based on the Iolab decision) is debunked in Crowley's opposition brief (at pp. 9-13).

The Qualcomm opinion implicitly recognizes that, if the insured in that case had not released its primary insurer, it could have pursued coverage from both the primary and excess insurers in a single action, despite the fact that the primary limits had not yet been fully exhausted by payment. The Qualcomm court acknowledged that, under California law, "'The obligation to indemnify . . . arises when the insured's underlying liability is established.'"

2008 Cal.App. LEXIS at *17, quoting Montrose Chemical Corp. v. Admiral Ins. Co., 10 Cal.4th 645, 655, fn.2 (1995), and Safeco Ins. Co. of America v. Fireman's Fund Ins. Co., 148 Cal.App.4th 620, 630 (2007); see also Crowley's opposition brief at pp. 16-17. However, the Qualcomm court found that the insured's release of the primary insurer -- which resulted in its not being a party to the insurance coverage action -- had precluded the trial court from determining whether, prior to the release, the primary insurer had incurred an obligation to indemnify its insured for the full amount of the primary limits at the point in time when the insured's underlying liability was established. See 2008 Cal.App. LEXIS at *39 ("Home Indemnity's result is based on disparate facts and circumstances rendering it inapposite here, including the fact that National is not a party to this action and the trial court cannot determine its liability, particularly where it has received a release from Qualcomm").

Finally, because there was no contention in Qualcomm that the excess insurer had breached a duty to accept a reasonable settlement, there was no argument in that case -- as there is here -- that the excess insurer had thereby waived its right to enforce conditions precedent such as the loss payable clause which is the subject of the present motions. See Crowley's opposition brief at pp. 20-21.

For all the foregoing reasons, Qualcomm does not support the relief sought by RLI and Twin City, whose motions to dismiss should be denied.
